All these abuses could be obviated by a four line bill providing that each member should be allowed a reasonable amount for contingent expenses to be drawn from the state treasury, the same as is done with the senators and representatives in Washington. Then every member would be treaty exactly alike. Each could buy his supplies wherever he pleased: one or two firm would not get all the "velvet." There is one feature of this bill that is bad, and that is, the provisions Officials are supposed to carry out No Indigestion, Reartburn, Sourness

ple. They are supposed to carry out the people's wishes after the people have declared them. The idea of the candidates getting together in convention and formulating a platform telling the people what they want is preposterous and ridiculous, subservient to good legislation and contrary to the fundamental principles of republican government. It is the proper function of officialdom to obey the behests of the people not to issue commands to them.
